Back to the amendment as subamended two (2) times:

That the ratification of the associations be conditional on the confirmation of the adoption of the principles of the CRUES verbatim by the member associations in question at the next congress and that the membership status of the student associations wishing their affiliations be effective as of today.

Adopted unanimously

Back to the main one as amended one (1) time:

The following associations are affiliated to CRUES :

- Social Sciences Students' Association (Université de Laval)
- School of community and public affairs student association (Concordia University)
- General Science Student Association (Université de Sherbrooke)
- General Association of Students of Collège Lionel-Groulx
- Political Science and Law Graduate Student Association (UQAM)

That the ratification of the associations be conditional on the confirmation of the adoption of the principles of CRUES verbatim by the member associations in question at the next congress and that the membership status of the student associations wishing to be affiliated be effective as of today.

Adopted unanimously

Statement by the AGES to the effect of its decision to suspend its membership:

In accordance with position 13 of the General Science Student Association, which reads "AGES advocates the autonomy of student groups" and by the mandates invested in us by the General Assembly, we announce that the General Science Student Association suspends its membership in CRUES until further notice. The obligation to adopt specific mandates verbatim to the AGES by the CRUES contravenes this position. Having the mandate of our members to respect the AGES' desire for autonomy, we cannot consent, without further notice from them, to these conditions and are obliged to suspend our membership status until the required clarifications are communicated to us at the general meeting.

The AGES delegation leaves the congress.

Proposal:

That associations whose affiliation was ratified at the last congress be required to submit proof of a verbatim adoption of the principles of CRUES at the next congress.

Proposed by AGEECLG

Proposal:

Considering that since the beginning of the current conflict beginning on October 7, 2023, bombing tactics have led to more than 7000 deaths in the Gaza Strip;

Considering that these bombings lead to the disproportionate slaughter of women and children, especially when they target hospitals, as in the case of the strike on Gaza's al-Ahli hospital on 17 October, which killed more than 500 people;

Considering that 2.2 million people, most of them Palestinian réfugié.es since 1948, are imprisoned in a territory smaller than the size of the island of Montreal in the open-air prison of the Gaza Strip, the majority of them children under the age of 18, and are now deprived of water, food and electricity through the Israeli army headquarters, which controls everything that enters and leaves the Gaza Strip by sea, air or land;

Considering that these attacks and tactics on the part of Israel since 7 October, accompanied by its revanchist, racist and colonial rhetoric, raise fears of an attempt at genocide against the Palestinian people of Gaza;

That CRUES supports the Palestinian people in their resistance to the colonial and murderous aggression on the part of the Israeli state, its army, and its international patrons such as Canada, the United States, England and France,

That CRUES give its moral, organizational and material support to local organizations and groups supporting the Palestinian people and denouncing the massacre underway, both at the university level, and at the level of Montreal, so-called Quebec or so-called Canada,

That CRUES adopt a pro-BDS (Boycott, Divestment and Sanctions) mandate for the Israeli state and its murderous campaign of repression and occupation of Palestine.

Adopted unanimously

(Indicative vote: adopted unanimously)

Proposal:

Considering the harmful history of student federations;

Considering the narrow and patriarchal analyses put forward by the FECQ, which denounces the increase in tuition fees as an obstacle to starting a family and buying a house, without criticizing the anti-feminist character underlying the reproduction of the classic family model.

Considering the principles of combat unionism defended by CRES:

Considering the lack of clarity surrounding the interactions between CRUES and the student federations, the need to clarify how these interactions should be made in the future;

That CRUES adopt a mandate of distrust towards the student federations (in particular the FECQ and the UEQ).

That CRUES do not participate in the bodies of the student federations (in particular the FECQ and the UEQ).

That CCRUS, in all its future campaigns, struggles and activities, do not initiate contact with the student federations (in particular the FECQ and the UEQ), unless the request comes from a decision taken at the convention.

Whereas there are many students in so-called Quebec who come from outside the province or from abroad.

Considering the current climate of tuition fee hikes that target Principle 1, the section on free and "non-discriminatory" education of the CRUES.

Whereas most representative student associations are opposed to tuition fee increases and have a mandate in favour of free education.

Considering that CRUES has a duty to take care of all students, whether they are foreigners or nationals.

Whereas the increase in tuition fees for non-Quebec students is a prelude to an increase in tuition fees for Quebec students.

Whereas militant student unions and coalitions of these unions have a long history of strikes against tuition fee hikes and demands for free tuition.

Considering that this directly affects certain discriminated and marginalized groups more severely.

Considering that free education would cost only $1.2 billion per year for the whole of so-called Quebec, Quebec's budget being $148 billion per year.

Preferred proposal:

That the congress be adjourned for a period of 45 minutes - Return at 7:25 p.m.

Proposed by the Executive Council

Seconded by AFESH

Adopted unanimously

Proposal:

Considering the decision voted at the last congress of La CRUES which mentions the action plan for the salarization of internships;

Considering the current context of student insecurity and inflation;

Considering that the non-salaried status of internships is an element contributing to the financial precariousness of students;

Considering the multiplicity of factors that lead to student precariousness and that the various member associations of CRUES will be able to adapt a campaign on this theme according to their respective realities;

Considering that the government's budget cuts in the public sector affect both workers and interns, among whom are overrepresented women, student-parents and immigrants;

Considering that salaried internships would help to reduce the context of precariousness for many students, particularly in traditionally female professions;

Considering the extent of the pre-existing mobilization on the issues of salaried internships, particularly in environments that are usually less mobilized.

That CRUES and its members commit to strengthening the mobilization committee as well as mutual aid among member associations in order to foster activist cooperation, but this does not rely entirely on the executive committee.

That CRUES continue to prioritize the campaign on the salaried status of all internships.

That CRUES and its members adopt tactical diversity in their activism in order to advance the mobilization and activist progress of the campaign.

That this campaign is based on a perspective of accessibility to studies and access to decent living conditions, and that the campaign's argument seeks to link free education and salaried internships on this basis.

That CRUES begin an increase in pressure tactics to obtain the salaries of all internships and in this sense organize the holding of three days of strike in the winter session 2024, the modalities of which would be decided by the congress.

Back to the amendment:

"That CRUES begin an increase in pressure tactics to obtain the salaries of all internships and in this sense organize the holding of three days of strike in the winter session 2024, the modalities of which would be decided by the congress."
That we replace "That CRUES continue to prioritize the campaign on the salarisation of all internships." "That the CRUES, as part of its campaign to obtain the salaries of all internships, hold three days of strike on March 6, 7 and 8, in particular as part of the International Day of Struggle for Women's Rights."
Let it be removed "that the campaign's argument seeks to link free education and salaried internships on this basis"

Incidental proposal:

That the amendment be split so as to deal separately "That it be removed that the campaign's argument seeks to link free education and salaried internships on this basis".

Back to the amendment as subamended one (1) time:

"That CRUES begin an increase in pressure tactics to obtain the salaries of all internships and in this sense organize the holding of three days of strike in the winter session 2024, the modalities of which would be decided by the congress."
That we replace "That CRUES continue to prioritize the campaign on the salarisation of all internships." by "That the CRUES, as part of its campaign to obtain the salaries of all internships, hold three days of strike in the week of March 25"

Adopted unanimously

(Indicative vote: adopted unanimously)

On the 2nd part of the amendment:

Let it be removed "that the campaign's argument seeks to link free education and salaried internships on this basis".

Adopted by a majority

(Indicative vote: rejected by a majority)

Let's take a look back at the main one as amended one (1) time:

Considering the decision voted at the last congress of La CRUES which mentions the action plan for the salarization of internships;

Considering the current context of student insecurity and inflation;

Considering that the non-salaried status of internships is an element contributing to the financial precariousness of students;

Considering the multiplicity of factors that lead to student precariousness and that the various member associations of CRUES will be able to adapt a campaign on this theme according to their respective realities;

Considering that the government's budget cuts in the public sector affect both workers and interns, among whom are overrepresented women, student-parents and immigrants;

Considering that salaried internships would help to reduce the context of precariousness for many students, particularly in traditionally female professions;

Considering the extent of the pre-existing mobilization on the issues of salaried internships, particularly in environments that are usually less mobilized.

That CRUES and its members commit to strengthening the mobilization committee as well as mutual aid among member associations in order to foster activist cooperation, but this does not rely entirely on the executive committee.

That CRUES continue to prioritize the campaign on the salarization of all internships.

That CRUES and its members adopt tactical diversity in their activism in order to advance the mobilization and activist progress of the campaign.

That this campaign be based on a perspective of access to education and access to decent living conditions.

That the CRUES, as part of its campaign to obtain the salaries of all internships, hold a three-day strike during the week of March 25 to 29.

Opens at 8:52 AM.

Proposal:

Considering the need to have a clear campaign;

Considering the rather low number of staff on the executive and committees;

Considering the continuation of the campaign so far;

Considering that CRUES is a relatively young group;

That our campaign focuses specifically on the salaried status of internships.

Let CRUES still be in solidarity with the other struggles on an ad hoc basis.

That we mandate the CRUES team to support the local associations in the holding of the 3 days of strike.

That the CRUES team be mandated to organize a feminist training camp.

That the CRUES team be mandated to encourage the transfer of knowledge and the holding of training activities by having a specifically intersectional vision of these different modalities of transmission of knowledge and skills.
